

COPYRIGHT INFRINGEMENT

Materials students, faculty and staff wish to download, such as movies, music, software, games, sound recordings, lyrics, images, etc., are protected by copyright. Copyrighted works may not be copied, sold, distributed, displayed, performed publicly, or used to create new works without the owner's permission. The "Fair Use" exception allows copying; for more information please consult: <http://www.copyright.gov/fls/fl102.html>

Downloading or uploading files from the Internet and file sharing are deemed infringement if done without the copyright owner's permission and fair use does not apply.

It is the intention of Laguna College of Art + Design to adhere to the provisions of the United States Copyright Law (Title 17, U.S. Code). Almost everything in print and most of what you find online is copyrighted material. This is true for all material on the LCAD website and for all material that you access through the LCAD proxy server. The Library contracts with several database publishers and vendors to provide resources to LCAD students and faculty for educational use; these are made available at no additional charge to students, faculty and staff, but are subject to the conditions of the licensing contracts between LCAD and the publishers. Copyright laws are complicated, particularly as they relate to educational and fair use. Please consult the librarian if you have questions about compliance with the law.

For more information about the U.S. Copyright law, consult: <http://www.copyright.gov/title17/>